So I was just grabbing some stuff from the refrigerated section when I noticed all this commotion happening over by the specialty pizza counter. People were gathering around, looking confused and kind of annoyed, so naturally I got curious and wandered over to see what was going on. That's when I heard someone talking about this pizza—an edible-gold pizza with a mozzarella unicorn on top. Apparently it had been there, and now it was gone.

I didn't actually see the pizza myself, but from what everyone was saying about it, it sounded absolutely ridiculous in the best way possible. Like, edible gold and a unicorn made of mozzarella? That's the kind of thing you have to see to believe. I'm kind of bummed I missed it, honestly, because it sounds hilarious.

I was just standing there listening to people describe it when I realized the whole vibe in the store had shifted. Customers who'd apparently ordered it or were planning to order it were getting legitimately hangry about this missing pizza. You could feel the energy change, like someone had flipped a switch. People were pacing around, looking at the empty counter space, muttering to each other about it. One guy was asking his friend, "Where's the unicorn?" in this really dramatic way that made me snort-laugh even though I had no idea what was going on.

People were throwing out these absolutely ridiculous theories about what happened. Someone suggested maybe the mozzarella unicorn came alive and just decided to leave. Another person joked that aliens must've abducted it for study. It was turning into this whole hilarious drama, and I was just here for the show.

But what really got me was watching the employee trying to deal with all these frustrated customers. They kept asking the same questions over and over—"Where's my pizza? I ordered it this morning!" And this poor employee had to stand there, looking increasingly confused and genuinely amused at the same time, just explaining again and again that the pizza was gone. Just vanished. No explanation, nothing. You could see them trying not to laugh while also being stressed about disappointing everyone.

Honestly, it was kind of the most entertaining thing I've witnessed in forever. I didn't even come here to see a mystery, but I accidentally got front-row seats to an actual pizza disappearance drama. The whole situation was so absurd and ridiculous that I couldn't stop grinning about it. It's definitely the story I'm telling everyone for the next week. I mean, how often do you get to say you happened to be in the right place at the right time to witness an edible-gold unicorn pizza just vanish without a trace?
